Terri A. Lorenzon, Director
Environmental Quality Council

Dear Environmental Quality Council,

I am writing in support of the petition regarding CBM water. I think it should be put to good use, not just flushed down a river somewhere. It should be purified so that it could be used, possibly for irrigation, or whatever.

Wyoming is a dry, drought stricken land to begin with. It is unconscionable to be "throwing away" any potentially usable water, but there's countless gallons of it being wasted.

Who's going to pay for all this purification, etc., you ask? Whoever's reaping the benefits from taking it out of the ground in the first place. The State of Wyoming should also stand some of the cost because it let them do it.

Use every value resource you're taking out of the ground to its fullest potential. It's the only smart, responsible thing to do.

Sincerely,

Christina Denney
